

Spring Trends: Why Maximalism Is The New Minimal In Garden Design

Section	Description	Key Elements
Spring Trends: Why Maximalism Is The New Minimal	This section introduces the shift in garden design trends from minimalism to maximalism. It emphasizes filling spaces with bold colors, dense textures, and layered planting to create a lush and personal sanctuary, even in small areas.	Maximalism, bold colors, layered textures, personal sanctuary
The Rise of Color and Maximalism in Gardens	Focuses on using diverse plants to create vibrant, dynamic gardens. The style prizes personal expression, sensory engagement, and ecological benefits like supporting pollinators and mini-ecosystems.	Mix of species, sensory immersion, ecological impact, personal expression
Designing for Small Spaces and Patio Containers	Details techniques for applying maximalist principles in compact areas. Highlights the importance of verticality, layered arrangements, and creatively packed containers for smaller spaces.	Vertical planting, layered containers, creative small space use
Perennials: The Backbone of a Colorful Garden	Discusses the structural role of perennials in creating a stable foundation for a maximalist garden with recurring color and life. Notes specific plants like hostas and lavender as examples.	Perennials, structural foundation, recurring blooms, hostas, lavender
Annuals: Adding Dynamic Variety	Explains how dynamic annuals complement perennials by introducing vivid, long-lasting colors to the garden design. Features examples like petunias, marigolds, and impatiens.	Annuals, vibrant color, dynamic displays, petunias, marigolds
Planting Tips for a Maximalist Garden	Provides nurturing tips for achieving dense planting. Covers soil preparation, watering, dead-heading, and maintaining healthy, vibrant ecosystems.	Dense planting, soil quality, watering, dead-heading
Conclusion	Encourages gardeners to embrace maximalism as a way to find joy and reflect personality through their outdoor spaces. Highlights the accessibility of this trend for spaces of any size.	Maximalism, joy, personal expression, accessibility